British travellers can apply to skip US immigration queues

Visitors to the States will be able to join a scheme that will allow them to skip the notoriously long queues at US immigration from December following the expansion of Global Entry to British citizens. Global Entry, which is already available at 46 US airports and 13 preclearance locations, allows for faster processing of pre-approved, low-risk travellers. However, travellers have to go through a lengthy application process and spend more than £100 in fees, so the scheme is likely to be most appealing to the 125,000 British citizens who travel to the US at least four times a year.

British citizens will have to register via the Home Office website and pay a £42 fee. If they pass the UK vetting process they will be given an access code to enter when applying for Global Entry through the Global Online Enrolment System. Once their application is approved, they must have an interview with an officer to assess eligibility. The fee for a five-year membership is $100. Applications can be made from 3 December 2015.

New e-passport gates at Heathrow Terminal 5

New e-passport gates at Terminal 5 make arrivals easier. Fifteen of the newest generation E-passport gates have now opened at London Heathrow Terminal 5, allowing arriving customers to get through the UK border more quickly. Automated e-passport gates offer an alternative to conventional passport checks.

Customers simply scan their e-passport at the barrier. The system runs a face recognition check against the chip in their passport and then, if they're eligible to enter the UK, the gate will open automatically – all in a matter of seconds.

Customers need to be over 18 and to have an e-passport (shown by the 'chip' logo on the front), issued by a country in the European Economic Area or Switzerland.
